Foreword

WE, the Class Book Committee of June, 1934, have spent much time and energy so our classmates may have a pleasant means of turning back the years and viewing again the happy days spent in High School.

Regardless of what the future may hold in store, the pleasant memories of our school, faculty, and classmates will always remain glowing throughout the coming years.

Best wishes for every member of the Class of June, 1934. May they have a pleasant future and notable success.

Dedication

We, the class of June 1934, respectfully dedicate our Class Book to

Miss Mabel F. Rand

in recognition of her kindly service as teacher and friend at
New Bedford High School.

MABEL F. RAND

Officers and Class of

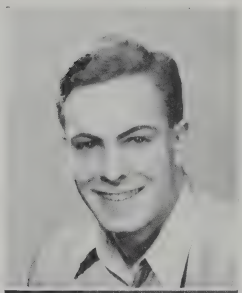
June, 1934



President

FREDERICK WILLIAM OESTING

October 4, 1916 — Cook School
New Bedford, Mass. — Scientific

A leader both of men and destiny. Success is assured, because the elements are so mixed in him that one can stand and say, "This is a man."

Major R. O. T. C. '34;
President of Student Council '34; Track '33;
President of Senior Class;
Glee Club '32; Track '31.

West Point

Secretary

EDNA MAE STERLING

August 22, 1916 — Roosevelt Junior High School
New Bedford, Mass. — Commercial

Edna is as sweet as she is pretty. That is why we elected her as our Secretary.

Secretary of Graduating Class; Treasurer of Student Council;
Student Representative to N. B. Woman's Club;
Glee Club; Girls' Welfare League;
Traffic Officer.

Kinyon's

Vice President

EDNA MAY LEES

June 24, 1916 — Normandin Junior High School
New Bedford, Mass. — Commercial

Edna always has a sweet smile for everyone. We all know she will make a charming nurse.

Glee Club '32, '33; Student Council;
Vice President of Graduating Class.

Union Hospital Training School

Treasurer

NORMAN FOURNIER

May 21, 1916 — Roosevelt Junior High School
New Bedford, Mass. — College Classical

Norman is gifted with the talents of leadership, brains, and personality. He has not advertised his wares too loudly, but do not be surprised when you find him out and 'way up in the world.

Honor Society; Treasurer Class of '34;
Assistant Adjutant R. O. T. C.; Glee Club '32;
Managing Editor of "Brevities" '34;
Varsity Debating Team '34; Traffic Squad '33, '34;
Debating Club; Manager R. O. T. C. Basketball Team '34;
Secretary of Honor Society; Student Council

Valedictorian

JACOB HOROWITZ

June 25, 1917 Roosevelt Junior High School
New York City Scientific

Jacob is one of the brightest boys in our class and knows the largest words of any student. He is always willing to share his brains with others less fortunate than he, and is willing to shoulder responsibility.

Honor Society; Captain Chess Team '33;
Class Prophet Committee;
Chairman Honor Society Program Committee
Harvard

Salutatorian

ELIZABETH MANN BIGELOW

July 2, 1915 Clarence A. Cook School
New Bedford, Mass. College Classical

Eliza looks intelligent, and for once appearances are not deceptive. This girl placed second in scholastic honors—quite an accomplishment in a class of 250 with 15 high honor pupils. We predict a notable college career for Elizabeth.

Glee Club '30, '31, '32; Honor Society
Mount Holyoke

Third Honors

KENNETH V. CHACE, 3rd Honors

April 24, 1916 Normandin Junior High School
North Dartmouth, Mass. College Scientific

If whaling were flourishing, the town would have to honor Kenny for his assiduous burning of the midnight oil. Kenny proves that genius is 1% inspiration and 99% perspiration—or 93.36%, for that is the average that landed him third honors.

Honor Society; Mechanical Drawing
Worcester Polytechnic Institute

Fourth Honors

MARGARET FRANCES ANNE BOUGIE

June 6, 1916 Roosevelt Junior High School
New Bedford, Mass. Commercial

Although Margaret has been very studious during her high school career, she has found time to join in all the fun and make herself one of the most popular and well liked girls in our class.

Glee Club '32; Gym Leader's Club '32;
Honorary 1st Lieut. R. O. T. C. '33, '34; Dramatic Club '32;
Class Banquet Committee; Honor Society;
Class Ring Committee

ALICE AINSWORTH

February 27, 1915 — Roosevelt Junior High School
New Bedford, Mass. — Commercial

Alice is one of our classmates who has a winning smile. She has always been studious during her school career and we know she will be a huge success. May we extend our best wishes to you, Alice.

Art '31, '32, '33

BEATRICE ALLEN

June 17, 1916 — Clarence A. Cook School
New Bedford, Mass. — Normal Preparatory

It has been said that the way to gain knowledge is to ask questions. According to this saying, Beatrice will have a great store of knowledge when she finishes her schooling for she certainly has mastered the art.

Special Chorus; Orchestra II; Band I.

Bryant-Stratton College

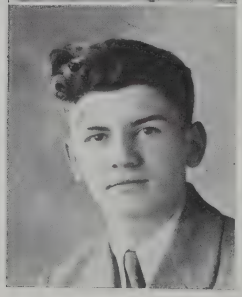
DORIS ALLISON

January 30, 1916 — Normandin Junior High School
New Bedford, Mass. — Commercial

Doris is a girl who likes to smile and most of the time she is smiling. We are sure she will make a big success as an artist. Here's hoping that she will rise to fame.

Glee Club; Art

Boston Swain School



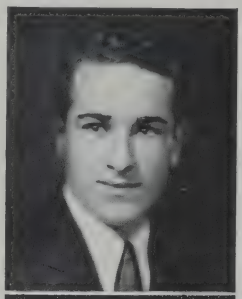
CARLTON DOUGLAS ANTHONY

November 16, 1916 — Parker Street School
New Bedford, Mass. — Commercial

Carlton is one of the reasons why the "Brevities" became so popular. He was the editor during his last term in high school. We all wish him good luck, but we know he will succeed in anything he undertakes.

Co-Editor of the "Brevities" '33;
Editor-in-Chief of the "Brevities" '34;
Dramatic Society '33, '34;
Publicity Manager of Dramatic Club '34;
Honor Society '33,'34; Class Prophet

Undecided



JOSEPH AULISIO

May 8, 1916 — Parker Street School
New Bedford, Mass. — Scientific

Joe's cute curly hair ought to kill his shyness. These athletes have a way with them. Good luck, Joe.

Interclass Basketball '31, '32; Interclass Baseball '33; Varsity Basketball '33, '34

Textile School of New Bedford

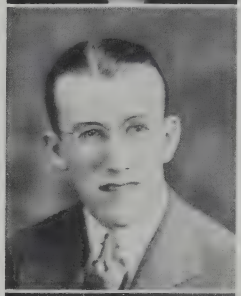
LEO BALANDYK

July 3, 1916 — Roosevelt Junior High School
New Bedford, Mass. — Commercial

Leo is the great musician of our class and always made a striking picture in his band uniform.

Band I '31, '32, '33; Orchestra I '32, '33;

Orchestra II '31.



ROLAND EDGAR BALTHAZAR

September 22, 1917 — St. Anthony's School
New Bedford, Mass. — College Classical

Can you imagine Roland as a musician? Nevertheless, he can cheer you up if anyone in this world can. Best of luck in the future.

Freshman and Sophomore Orchestra; Glee Club

University of McGill

THOMAS PAUL BARRY

December 29, 1916 — Holy Name School
New Bedford, Mass. — College Scientific

Studying did not come as easy to "Tom" as skill in athletics did. Perseverence always wins, however, and now it has brought him to graduation.

Baseball '32, '33; Hi-Y Club; Leader's Class '33; Interclass Basketball '32, '33; Glee Club

Undecided

FRED BEARDSWORTH, JR.

May 27, 1916 — Clarence A. Cook School
New Bedford, Mass. — College Scientific

Fred has not only the respect and admiration but also the liking and admiration of all his classmates. Modesty alone kept him from more honors, for he is the most popular boy among us.

Class President '31, '32; Football '32, '33; Baseball '32, '33, '34; President Honor Society '34; Class Gym Leader '31, '32; Hi-Y Club

Brown University

DOROTHY M. BENOIT

July 9, 1915 — Roosevelt Junior High School
New Bedford, Mass. — Commercial

"Dot" is another one of our demure little misses. She has a smile for everyone and a helping hand for all. "To be seen and not heard" is her motto.

Glee Club '31, '32, '33; Singing '32, '33; Art '33, '34; Interclass Debater '34; Honor Society; Basketball '34

SIDNEY MAYNARD BESEROSKY

October 30, 1916 — Clarence A. Cook School
New Bedford, Mass. — Classical

Even though Sid has taken a vacation once or twice a week since he has been with us, he always seemed to get pretty high marks. We all hope that he keeps up the good work.

Orchestra

Harvard

NORMAN BLANCHETTE

June 9, 1916 — Normandin Junior High School
New Bedford, Mass. — College Scientific

Two hundred and fifty pounds of bone and beef, the Leviathan of the gridiron—that's "Fat." He showed us what happens when an immovable body gets into motion with irresistible momentum. But beneath this rough exterior there beats a mirthful heart.

Football '31, '32, '33; Track '31, '32, '33, '34; Hi-Y Member; Leader's Class; Interclass Baseball and Basketball; Glee Club

ELSIE BOARDMAN

August 27, 1916 Roosevelt Junior High School
New Bedford, Mass. Commercial

We hear when Elsie was at Roosevelt she kept the pupils informed as to the latest dances. At high school Elsie did not allow outside affairs to interfere with her school work, and that is the reason she has been so successful.

Glee Club '32, '33; Art '32, '33

Kinyon's

SOPHIE ADELLA BOGACZ

September 7, 1916 Normandin Junior High School
New Bedford, Mass. Normal

This young lady of the winning name has a personality of like nature. She is always smiling even when she recites in class. I guess she has a good reason for this. Best wishes for success, Sophie!

Leader's Club; Glee Club '31, '32; Color League '31, '32, '33; Art '31, '32, '33; Singing Class '31, '32, '33; Welfare League '33, '34

MANUEL J. BOTELHO

May 4, 1914 Roosevelt Junior High School
New Bedford, Mass. Commercial

Manuel never has a great deal to say, but he tries to make it right when he does say it.

R. O. T. C.

MARGARET LOUISE BOYLE

September 24, 1916 Betsy B. Winslow School
New Bedford, Mass. College Classical

Margaret may be quiet and shy, but she certainly has her ways. We wish her the best of luck in all her future undertakings.

MARCEL BRAUN

July 19, 1915 — Sacred Heart Grammar School
New Bedford, Mass. — Scientific

Marcy may be observed in the cafeteria, in between two or three chocolate bars, chasing around to have something explained. You must know everybody in the school by now, "Marcy."

Leader's Club; Baseball '32; Debating Society;
Drawing; Color League Basketball and Baseball

LOUISE BRIGGS

June 20, 1916 — Mt. Pleasant School
New Bedford, Mass. — Commercial

Louise always had something to tell to the rest of her classmates and never failed to be a great help at "Philo" meetings.

Secretary Philomathean '34;
Vice-President Glee Club '30, '31;
"Brevities" Stenciller '33, '34;
Welfare Hospitality Chairman '34; Art '30, '31

Lewis is another blond with a peaches-and-cream skin. The young ladies like it, and also his brisk humor with a quick smile.

R. O. T. C.; Mechanical Drawing; Traffic Squad; Track '33; Freshman Basketball

Northeastern University

MARY EVELYN BROWN

August 14, 1916 — Thomas R. Rodman School
New Bedford, Mass. — College Classical

Mary is one of the smallest but liveliest girls of the class. Her eyes are always twinkling with some mischief. She's been said to have looked angelic, but looks are deceiving. We wish you the best of luck, Mary.

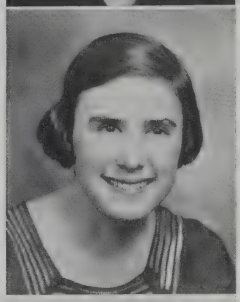
HOPE LOUISE DARLING

November 26, 1916 — Durfee High School
Fall River, Mass. — Normal Preparatory

The fact that Hope came from a rival high school does not antagonize us a bit. Where Durfee lost out we gained. Best of luck in all you undertake at Swain's, Hope.

Glee Club '32; Art '32, '33, '34; Philo Club '33

Swain School of Design



CORNELIA MARGUERITE DARWIN

January 13, 1916 — Normandin Junior High School

EDWARD FRANCIS FEENEY

April 24, 1914 — Holy Name School
New Bedford, Mass. — Commercial

"Eddie" is a quiet, reserved chap. He is so quiet he is thought a pessimist. He is not, for no matter what comes or goes he looks at life with a smile. Good luck at B. C., "Eddie."

R. O. T. C. '29, '30, '31, '32

Boston College

MARGUERITE FENNESSEY

February 18, 1916 — Normandin Junior High School
Boston, Mass. — Commercial

"Midget" is that sweet little miss who will soon be a hit on Broadway. Our dancing lady is a great rival of Joan Crawford. And she sure is bound for fame. Success is making a target for her and that won't turn her head. With her pleasing personality, giggles and laughter, to us, she will forever be the same little "Midget."

Girls' Welfare League; Gym; Glee Club

Wilfred's Academy

ALICE THERESA FILACHOWSKA

September 14, 1915 — Our Lady of Perpetual Help School
New Bedford, Mass. — Commercial

Our "Al" will make a charming lady. You'll have no trouble in getting the grade with such poise and personality. We all want you as our friend and wish you all possible happiness in the future.

Wilfred's Academy

SYLVIA FLEISH

June 11, 1916 — Normandin Junior High School
Acushnet, Mass. — College Classical

Although Sylvia has a long distance to come to school, she is never late and seldom misses a day. In spite of the long walk and ride, she never fails to have her lesson, and her marks are among the highest in the class.

Honor Society '32, '33, '34; Orchestra '32, '33

JOHN HOWARD FREEMAN

January 9, 1916 — Thomas R. Rodman School
New Bedford, Mass. — Commercial

"Johnny" was the congenial First Sergeant of "C" Co. He has always been a crack member of this company, as he was on their winning prize squad. We wish you the best of luck at Northeastern.

While Allen does not often express himself, when he does do so, he is quite forceful.

Class Day Committee

New Bedford Textile

MARION JOLITZ FULLER

March 9, 1916 — Clarence A. Cook School
New Bedford, Mass. — Normal Preparatory

Take a hint from one who knows. When you feel sick and need a nurse ask for Marion. Her pleasing personality will make you want to get better so you can further your acquaintance with her.

Glee Club; Special Chorus; Singing and Art

Peter Bent Brigham Hospital

ALFRED JOSEPH FUNARO

March 4, 1916 — Mt. Pleasant School
New Bedford, Mass. — Scientific

Alfred is one of those strong silent men with wavy hair and a determined will who have little to do with the opposite sex. His arguments with Mr. Whitmarsh and Mr. Searls were always the delight of the class.

Class History

By JACOB HOROWITZ

From time immemorial, students have been going through high school. In every class certain pupils have attained more prominence than the rest. Always, however, every pupil has succeeded, each according to his inclinations and aptitudes, in enjoying a suitable share of the social, athletic, military, intellectual, and governmental affairs of school life.

When, in September of 1930, our school days began, we thought of other things than unaccustomed homework, Mr. Dorman's voice, and report cards. Each one of us had ambitions. We looked forward to dances and elections and opportunity to express our talents.

In this mood of expectation we held our first class meeting. Officers were elected for the freshman year. Fred Beardsworth was president; Ralph Lider, vice-president; Edward Tighe, secretary, and Priscilla Linderson was treasurer.

They presented us to the seniors at the delightful Freshman Reception which followed. There we were initiated into the spirit of the school. Remember that we were mostly an immature crowd, just beginning to grow up. By the time the feel of the school was in our bones a large group came in from the junior highs.

The sophomore year was initiated by the arrival of these strangers. They, too, were not slow in learning the ways of the school. The first meeting of the augmented group was an exciting one for the newcomers. Its purpose was the election of class officers. Each school clamored for its favorite sons, the newcomers loudest. However, Fred Beardsworth was re-elected president; elected vice-president was Marjorie Cowden (who left school later); Elizabeth Hirshlag was secretary; and Konstantine Yankopolus, as treasurer, chased us around for class dues.

Already the class felt at home in high school, and those with ambitions started out to fulfill them. Many joined the R. O. T. C., or played freshman football, or went out for various athletics. As we began morning sessions we found more time and opportunity for outside activities. The sophomore year sped swiftly while we fitted ourselves into the scheme of school life.

The junior year was an extension of the preceding year, with our efforts just beginning to bear fruit. Uncontested, because of student apathy, the following officers were elected. Konstantine Yankopolus stepped into the president's shoes; Shirley Horvitz became vice-president; Muriel Robinson, secretary; and Teresa O'Donnell, treasurer.

Late in the year, promotions were numerous among our classmates in the R. O. T. C. Several of our debaters came to the fore. Track, baseball, and minor sports had their share of our classmates. By vote of the faculty, the Harvard Book was awarded to Kenneth Chace.

An innovation, in the shape of a chess team, made its appearance that year. Though little heralded, it pursued an undefeated season to bring home a large cup as champions of Greater New Bedford schools. In future years, this team will be much more prominent, as members of our class gave it a good start.

It was in our senior year that the full flower of our achievements came to bloom. From the R. O. T. C. stepped Major William Oesting to fill the office of class president, and Captain Norman Fournier as class treasurer. Our vice-president was Edna May Lees; our secretary, Edna Sterling.

Late fall brought out the football team, the debating team, and minor sports—as well as a host of new R. O. T. C. officers.

How puny next year's football team will be with Fred Beardsworth, Norman Blanchette, Mario Rose, Bernard Messier, Edward Leahy, and Ralph Lider—God's gifts to football coaches—graduated!

There will be no back-talk from the debating team, now that Eleanor Rothwell, Norman Fournier, and Konstantine Yankopolus are departed.

Lament, ye soldiers, that your leaders are no more! Praise the valiant officers: Major William Oesting; Captains Norman Fournier, Norman Hilditch, Norman Boucher, Nathaniel Lipschitz; Lieutenants Norbert Brennan, Ernest Laviolette, Edward Grzesik, Kenneth Ruffley, Macie Sylvia, Lewis Brown! Relate the tale of William Oesting, who was Major for two terms, as few other majors have been! And while speaking of Oesting, do not forget Margaret Bougie, one of the sponsors who kept up the morale of the unit. Bernice Caswell, honorary major, also graduates with us.

It is well for the school that our classmates are not very numerous on the traffic squad.

At the beginning of the term, the honor graduates were announced in the following order: Jacob Horowitz, Elizabeth

Bigelow, Kenneth Chace, Margaret Bougie—and a long list of more with highest credit. At the same time the Honor Society chose Fred Beardsworth as president, Konstantine Yankopolus as vice-president, and Norman Fournier as treasurer. Norman later resigned, because of his many other activities.

Norman was also managing editor of the "Brevities," of which Carlton Anthony was editor-in-chief. The "Brevities," too, suffers a grievous loss from graduation.

Of course, we had to plan ahead for graduation from the earliest minute. To choose the various committees which carried on the work of organizing graduation, the Nominating Committee was elected by the class. The committees appointed are found elsewhere in the Class Book.

Finally, after a hectic term terminated by the Senior Prom, the Banquet, and Commencement, we find leisure to read the Class History. It is fitting that we should review our activities and judge the worth of our accomplishments.

We went through school during the blackest years America has seen. One result of the depression has been that we are the largest class yet graduated from the New Bedford High School. Another distinction, noteworthy when one considers the trying circumstances of home life during these years, is that our class is the brightest, scholastically, ever turned out here. Ten—an amazing, unequalled number—of our classmates graduate with highest credit—an A average. Five more come within one point of highest honors. Thirty more graduate with credit. Truly we may be proud of such a group!

Outside of intellectual achievements, our class's work has been overshadowed by the brilliancy both of our predecessors and of our followers. Our debaters and our actors have not shone to fit advantage. Our athletes have done a little better. But our leaders have been the blessing of the class.

Some individual records are worthy of respect. Glance over Fred Beardsworth's record in the Class Book: Class officer, athlete, honor pupil, popular. Look up William Oesting, Norman Fournier, Konstantine Yankopolus—and their equals.

They represent the best of our class. With the mind's eye focussed on the shining example set by such as they, may we perform our share of service in the world as we have enjoyed our share of activity in school.

Prophecy

Prophecy, Class of June, 1934

Somewhere out on the mid-Atlantic three men were cast adrift on a raft. They sat conversing in tones of artificial loudness, for the unvaried wash of the waves sounded gloomy and solitary. One, a corpulent, ungainly man of about 38, sprawled near the edge of the raft, trying to appear nonchalant and dangling one leg in the ocean. When he thought he was unobserved, he would turn to stare at the melancholy visage of the tallest of the three. Both seemed waiting for the third to stop his flow of talk, which had gurgled unstemmed for some fifteen minutes.

"Isn't it strange how fate throws people together who haven't seen each other for twenty years? Here I haven't even thought of you two, and now this strange accident has cast the three of us alone on this little raft. In June, 1934, when we graduated from the New Bedford High School, I thought that I would never see you again. By the way, have you heard from any of your old classmates in New Bedford?"

"Why, yes, I kept in touch with many of them long after we graduated," replied the tall one. "Offhand I remember that Erwin Rydstrom is head counselor for the Kiddies' Playgrounds; Alfreda Martin is raising pigeons; Erich Nietsch, after losing his fortune in the stock market, is running a Select Young Ladies' Academy on Hawthorn Street with Elizabeth Sellers as the dean; Catherine O'Rourke conducts a kiddies' dancing school for the coming generation; Annie Perler is President of the Business and Professional Women's Club; Clayton Smith is the only red-headed janitor in the public schools; William Smith is peddling the United States mail; Winifred Melia is a sales clerk in the Five and Ten Cent Store and still gets into all the shows in town for ten cents. She is thinking of traveling over the country sometime for one-half fare. Doris Higginbottom went places because of her height, and she is now the only window-washer in town who doesn't need to carry a ladder; Marion Fuller sells Liberty Magazines at the corner of Purchase and Union Streets; Sophie Bogacz is the secretary of the Marie Antoinette Bachelor Apartments; Macie Sylvia is a local soccer player, and Norman Brittain, having risen from his position as page in the library, is now the elevator man."

"Some of our classmates went to live in New York also," chimed in the super-important person, "I have often met them going to and from work. Ralph Lider has a position posing for clothing advertisements; Teresa O'Donnell is a mannekin in one of the Fifth Avenue shops; Muriel Robinson made good on the stage in Sidney Beserosky's Follies; David Mikelson is singing blue songs as a sidekick for Stanley Niedgwiedski's orchestra; and surely you have all heard of 'Whitham's Willow Wafers' guaranteed to 'kure or kill.' Elmer is now a doctor and owner of a large hospital. Lionel Cormier is his business manager and employs all the nurses. Genowefa Lazowska is the pathologist and Helen Nickoloff is a technician. Wanda Piascyk is head of the children's ward and Irene Lewis, Helen Gley, Doris Wick, Rita LeDuc, and Mabel Ellis are employed as nurses. Kathryn Stasiun applies the anesthetics. But the greatest accomplishment of our classmates is the running of one of the country's largest newspapers, 'The New York Universe.' Norman Fournier is the editor-in-chief, with Norman Hilditch as Army correspondent, Leo Balandyk as editorial manager and Charles Kramer as Circulation Manager with Sam Feingold in charge of the newsboys. Louise Briggs's and Louise Chisnell's contribution consists of a Chatter Column and Elizabeth Jenkins proved to be an expert sob-sister. Elsie Almeida writes a Horoscope Column and Eleanor Cyr is the editor of a 'Quips from the Queer' column. The latest columnist is Edmund Levine, writing 'Nonsense.' Mary McCusker is reading copy and is a big help around the office. The advertising department of the paper is handled by Anthero Pacheco." And now, for a wonder, the speaker voluntarily gave way to another.

"I have done quite a little traveling since I left school," said the distinguished looking gentleman, "and I have met a number of our classmates in many parts of the world. Ernest Whitely is a barker in front of a circus side-show; John Oliveira is head guard at the Taunton University of Nuts and May Dudley is running one of the famous 'Ye Olde Sandwiche Shoppees' on Yale campus; Eileen Norris is leading an easy life leisurely roaming the world with Isabelle Sampson, who gives lectures on Old World ruins; Beatrice Timperly is doing missionary work among the natives on the South Sea Islands; Elmer Paul is a second Paul Muni in racketeer parts and Mario Rose is the head football coach at Notre Dame. Paul Pifko through his nerve and daring has a position as an air mail pilot with Manuel Botelho as his co-pilot, and what a ride they gave me. Out in Kansas I met Genevieve Wojtuszewski selling tickets in a railway station at Gullsborough."

Here the over-important person had a startling revelation to make. "Oh! did you know that Theresa Finni and Beatrice Allen are in partnership running a beauty parlor and their best patrons are Walter Izdebski and Howard Rossiter?" he interrupted. He proceeded to unload some more information. "After having retired from a very strenuous life in George White's Scandals, Bernice Caswell and Sylvia Rosen are now living a very quiet life in a Park Avenue Penthouse. Sabina Kamionek is writing bloodshed novels, which are being published by the 'Pressed Paper Publishing Company' under the management of Albert Gosselin and Charles Kieltyka. Evelyn Poole is head of one of the nurseries in a large New York department store, and, oh yes, Mary Saltys is also making a living writing novels. Have you ever read any of her books?"

"Yes, I have," replied the corpulent gentleman, "Most of them have been published by the Turbak Printing house, owned by Boleslaw himself. Did you know that Stella Dabrowska is an athletic directress and makes the rounds at the public schools in New Bedford? Phyllis Bragg has settled down on Pope Street with the ideal of her dreams; Dorothy Lipman eats up all the profits in her candy shop in Purchase Street; Mary Muulins is in a sleep endurance contest at Acushnet Park, and Helen Isherwood after leaving her work as a dietician now devotes all her time to counting calories."

He of the deep voice continued, "I received a letter, just before sailing, from William Oesting; he tells of marrying Margaret Bougie, who is a great inspiration. He is now a brain specialist in the service of the United States Army. With him is Nathaniel Lipschitz giving enlistment speeches for the Army. He speaks of a number of our classmates including Eleanor Fricker who has become very successful as a journalist for the Associated Press; Janina Koczwara who is a schoolma'am in Bakerville, South Dartmouth; August Santos who sold his picture to be used in razor blade advertisements. Frank Kutis is a cartoonist for a magazine; Ezaltina Moniz is a well known masseuse; Madeline Richards croons sweetly over a nation-wide network; Doris Lawrence poses for silk stocking advertisements, drawn by Hope Darling. Two girls who went different ways are Delphine Trahan who is making a world tour on a bicycle and Blanche Lague who washes dishes, dusts chairs, and keeps a neat house for the one and only. He also speaks of Frank Farin who has probably run for every political office in the country.

"When I was living in New Bedford before I took this trip, I often heard from various members of the class—Elizabeth Hirshlag now a bookkeeper in a Boston Department store; Lillian Frates married Stanley Murach, who is now running an undertaking establishment in Providence; Gertrude Diaz composes 'Mammy Songs' for Al Jolson. Beatrice Rose is the only woman justice on the supreme court; Jeannette Millette is a famed musician; Mary Matthews married a traveling salesman, Arthur Seddon; and Dorothy Braman is an expert typist for one of the largest typewriting firms in the country.

"Did you happen to see Abraham Steiner coming over on the boat? He dedicated his life to selling furlined bath tubs to the Russians. His banker, Herman Miller, is internationally known, and spends his leisure hours entertaining ambassadors." Squinting down his nose and licking his lips he went on, "Alice Filachowska is a French model and is under the management of Ralph Nelson and Norman Singleton; Alfred Benoit has a position on Ellis Island as an interpreter; Helen Swanson is private secretary for Antone Vivieros, a traveling millionaire; Mildred Roebuck and Margaret Lawless are running a 'Three chances for a Nickel Shop' at Crescent Park; Mary Zolt has achieved renown by being the last person listed on the New York telephone exchange; John Donald is a call-man in the 'pit' at Chicago and spends his evenings at the theater where Earle Smith is head usher. Can either of you add any facts?"

Dangling a toe idly in the water the ungainly one gave vent to his recollections, "Cornelia Darwin now holds the world's record for mountain climbing; John Valasakos, the last I saw of him, was hitch-hiking around the world; Hilda Frietas is a kindergarten teacher in the old home town; Natalie Hathaway is touring the country exhibiting a marvelous collection of shells, plants and phenomenons of nature. Her ticket collector, Mary Brown, is bawled out every day by Dolores Masse, the business manager. Annie Wright is the owner of an exclusive wearing apparel shop and Shirley Horvitz is producing her own plays with Ernest Laviolette as scenery designer. I often enjoy reading James Sullivan's Wild West Stories and Albert Rezendes, humorous columns in the humorous magazines."

"I went into the Long Life Insurance Company the other day to see my friend, Stanley Koczera, the manager," said the pompous person, "and was surprised to see Aslaug Haram taking dictation. We fell to talking about old times and he told me that his daughter is going to a college where Elizabeth Bigelow is teaching history. Riding downtown on the subway he mentioned Eleanor Coombs as running an employment agency; Hope Smith as a night club hostess and Catherine Roche in partnership with Virginia Hirst running a horticultural establishment downtown. According to him Sylvia Fleish is living on a large farm in the Middle West and Estelle Brouillette is a waitress in a New York cafe."

The distinguished person removed his false teeth from his mouth and clicking them vehemently as if to disturb the effusions of the pompous one, waited for the flow to abate so that he could step in himself. Seizing the right moment he cut in, "Dorothy Warren is now a second-hand clothes dealer; Boleslaw Matyanowski is a six day bicycle rider; Frank Lopes is a moving man with a large feminine clientele and Irene LeBlanc is running a poultry farm in North Rochester. Stanley Koczerga is a warden at the House of Correction; Alice Gradwell is running an alimony hotel; Emilia Gonet is on a farm in Wisconsin; Irene Gage has got a monopoly on rubber bands; Jennie Gomes is teaching history at Smith's College and Rita Jaillet has gone on the air pinch hitting for Thornton W. Burgess; Elsie King is business manager for Lily Kozlovsky who has made millions by selling pictures of her teeth to toothpaste companies to use in the 'after three days pictures' and Fleurette Lague is giving piano lessons in Walawala, Washington. See if you can rattle off a list like that."

It could be seen that the person with so much self-importance did not relish keeping his mouth closed, for, deprived of exercising his "gift of gab," he had to exercise his jaws otherwise, and was feverishly gnawing at his finger nails. At last unable to contain himself any longer, he burst out—"I just remembered Norman Harpin was captain of the boat we were on." With this statement as an entering wedge he entered upon another long harangue. "He was one of our schoolmates too. Dorothy Wilkinson is the librarian at Dartmouth and leads an exciting life rooming with Paula Noel, who writes verses for Christmas cards, in Yvette Payette's boarding house. Another roomer of hers is Juliette St. Pierre who starves between the editions of the Rip Van Winkle and Christmas Carol books for which she writes the shorthand plates. Irene Lassey is proprietor of a mail order house in Kalamazoo, Michigan and is employing Eleanor Rothwell, who has put her debating abilities to work selling silk stockings. Samuel Louis is owner of the Louis building where he rents his offices to Dora Eaton, a popular manicurst; Jane Neville, a clairvoyant; Helen Moskal, a seamstress; Florence Vieira, a photographer; Normand Raymond, a financial advisor; and Rita Martell, the only woman architect in town. Dora Provencher invented the 'Provencher Fire Extinguisher'; Wilhelmina Leach now owns a tea room in Acushnet; Roland Deschaine and Charles Riley are taking spells at the wireless of the U. S. S. Cuttlefish; Evelyn Matesich is a telephone operator in Cairo, Mississippi. John Hyland holds the United States and England amateur and open golf championships; Bernard Messier is pressing uniforms at a prep school and Eddy Leahy is caddy-master at the Sunnymeade Public Course. Francis Moore is living in the Artist's Quarter in Paris where he is having a hectic time wearing flowing red neckties, letting his hair grow, and patronizing the sidewalk cafes; Kenneth Chace and Samuel Cohen organized rival syndicates to establish communication with Mars and other heavenly bodies. Chace gave up this project and is now planning a tube through the earth to China. Dorothy Grew owns a truck garden in Aroostook County, Maine. Another one of our classmates who achieved fame is Marguerite Fennessey who went back to Erin and lassooed all the mosquitoes in County Mayo. While there she met Stella Patla who was making a pilgrimage to kiss the Blarney Stone. Catherine Rose and Christina Trotter are singing in a church choir. Edna Tootle is typing the statistics which Elizabeth Gurney gathers for Rose Horvitz the Secretary of Labor; Olive Davoll is a housekeeper at the estate of Ruth Lafferty. Janet Wieczorek conducts spelling lessons at the Y. W. C. A. in Peking, China. Henry Woodward is a branch manager for the 'Home Town Thistledown News.' John Shields is bodyguard for a prominent politician. James Reagan is touring the country with his medicine show."

During the voluble one's discourse the other two men on the raft had been growing more and more listless, and looking vacantly into space, indifferent to his gush of words. Becoming aware of the fact that his audience was not with him, and tired of hearing his own voice, he ceased to speak.

Silence fell upon the three, broken only by the disconsolate swishing of the waves. But alas! Not for long could he be silent.

"A penny for your thoughts," he addressed the pensive, tall man.

"I was dreaming about the party I had on my last birthday. It was a memorable day. I received telegrams from former classmates and many attended the reception. Fred Beardsworth came down from Washington where he was chairman of the Senate Committee regulating professional sports. A prosperous looking companion was with him, continually joking and greeting his friends. It was Walter Jackson, a lobbyist. Louis Brown, who ran an automobile plant, was also present with Walter Adamowicz, wealthy inventor of a chainless, gearless bicycle. The corner grocery man, Edward Sylvia, dropped in at the party with Thomas Barry, the policeman on the beat. The chemical firm of Marcel Braun and Allan Frost was represented by its two heads. We were entertained before dinner by John Wells who lectured over the radio on the 'Cause for Discoloration in Canned Crabmeat.' Norman Blanchette left his dietitian's consultation office in Oshkosh, Wisconsin to come down by train. I remember his telling me that Edward Hudecek was announcing stations in a blaring nasal tone. Bob Macy was the candy butcher on the train and Joseph Aulisio collected tickets. I also received messages from as far south as the wilds of Patagonia where Charles Rodrigues was accomplishing wonders among the natives by preaching to them until they fell asleep and then extracting their teeth painlessly."

The less talkative member of the party gave a preparatory hitch to his paunch and put in his contribution to the reminisences of the three.

"I was becoming dissatisfied with the diet at the New Bedford hotels, so I decided to take a trip of inspection through the country's cafeterias. Naturally I came across many of my former schoolmates. In Paris, Maine, I met Dorothy Johnson who had established a plant for the manufacture of babies' shoes and perambulators. I saw Hedwig Gudewich working in the testing laboratory of Aurora Guisti's Chewing Gum establishment. Beatrice Perry and Edith Reynolds were posting labels on Christmas packages during the holiday rush. Traveling onward I came to Wheeling, West Virginia where Cecelia Olszewski lived. Her milkman, John Freeman; her baker, Adela Farara; and her milliner, Elizabeth Neville were all old classmates. I met Julia Kozako on the train. She was going to visit Germaine Mathieu, a library clerk, in Kansas City. She advised me to visit Doris Allison, a private detective in the employ of Frank Gula's Protective Agency. Margaret White had opened a delicatessen across the street from the drug store where Mabel Davis compounded prescriptions. Continuing across the country, I stopped at Carson City, Nevada. Here I met Helen Kaszynski waiting on the table in the 'Cozy Carson City Cafe.' I had crossed half the country, in vain, seeking balm for my mistreated stomach. But not until I sat down to a meal prepared by Margaret Moura, who was the chef in Helen Downey's Golden Gate Restaurant at San Francisco, did I realize that inward satisfaction that comes only to the man with the artistic palate. While there I visited the offices of the Ideal Interior Decorating firm which had outfitted many prominent Californian estates and was directed by Edna Sterling, Catherine Vieira, Constance Silveira, and Margaret Trindade. Ernestine Furtado and Elsie Daniels were playing North and South on the national bridge team. I received a letter from Dorothy Benoit who was wild with enthusiasm over her project of painting a white line around the equator. I stopped off at a resort in Canada where, deep in the woods, Alice Ainsworth and Anita Souillere, having been disappointed in love, were getting away from it all. I was guided by Doris Couet and Marion Nickelson who were roughing it. Re-entering upon the solitary plains of Minnesota, I stopped at two neighboring ranches, one managed by Lillian Parker, and the other by Lucille Pedroza. I found that Edna May Lees was Dean of Women at the University of Michigan. Through her influence Monica Zygiel was teaching gym and Anita Hazel was lecturing on accounting and finance. Lucille Lague was secretary to Edna. In Chicago I met Joseph Pisarczyk who was a power in Polish politics with Ruth Chace as his publicity agent and Genowefa Barylski as the leader of his ward. At Buffalo, New York I saw the plane in which Elizabeth McHugh and Dorothy Mullaly were trying to break the women's flying endurance record. I heard Hazel Tripp preach a sermon in Albany where she was a minister. When in the State House at Boston, Massachusetts I saw Elsie Boardman who had a seat in the State Legislature and was working strongly for the labor class. Emily Milos guided me about the Museum of Fine Arts where she lectured on Rembrandt's pictures. Returning home I found a letter waiting for me from Alfred Funaro an old friend of mine. He wrote, that after leaving school he had roamed the world looking for the perfect job. 'At last I found it. A position that required the extensive use of all my scientific knowledge, a position that commanded precision to the most minute part of an inch. I am now measuring mosquitoes for muzzles'."

"Speaking of scientific precision," interrupted the tall person. "Watch me crack this nut." He pulled out his false teeth with a flourish, and from his vest pocket extricated a large walnut. Carefully he opened the jaws just wide enough to insert the walnut between the two rows of teeth. "See how careful I must be to crack the nut, not the teeth," he explained, meanwhile applying pressure to the jaws. Slowly his teeth, wielded by experienced fingers, sank into the shell, and with a despairing crunch the nut gave way.

"That," said he, "is precision. It is only a specimen of what our alma mater contributed to applied science. I can name a dozen great scientists among our classmates. The greatest of these, I am ashamed to say, is a woman—Muriel Phillips, who revolutionized chemical progress by discovering how to transform a glass of water and a burnt stick into pure, white, edible sugar,—the most important process ever invented. Then there is William Hamilton Smith Preece, who is working hard on the advanced mathematical theory of the rhythmic noises produced by the saxophone; and Ralph Tessier, who applied his knowledge of physics to the design of knotproof shoelaces. Benjamin Howe is applying scientific methods to an investigation of school-skipping which is expected to produce valuable remedies."

"Where are the dozen scientists you promised?" argued the pompous man.

"The class wasn't as great as I thought it was in my enthusiasm," admitted the other. "Most of the boys who started out to be scientists ended up far differently. David Brown led a movement to revive the clipper ship. Edward Feeney took to selling fish. David Hosie was appointed Commissioner of Hydrants. Leon Keches established the 'Nonpareil Hat Cleaning and Shoe Shining Parlor—Billiards in Rear.' Andrew Cheetham went into partnership with I Grabbem and manages a prosperous collection agency. Edward Grzesik is official spokesman for the waterboy's union. Adolph Jardin sees all the ball games free since he got a job plugging up knot-holes in the park fence. Norman Boucher is extremely happy as Exalted High Potentate of the International Brotherhood of Knights of the Brass Button. Clyde Page is captain of the All-American Water Ping-Pong Team. David Ward manages the 'Ride to Work' taxi agency. He has earned the undying hate of the street car company by his activities. Kenneth Ruffley is explaining to wide-eyed visitors the freaks found in the Mattapoisett Institute for the Perpetuation of Oddities, where Norbert Brennan is the hidden works inside the 'Great Mechanical Wonder! Plays Chess Automatically. Come one—come all—five cents'!" Suddenly the speaker broke off and reached down into the water. A happy grin contorted his lips as he fished out a sadly bedraggled newspaper. It was soaked through, but nevertheless it was a newspaper, and the print was very plain.

"Hurrah!" cried the tall man. "Civilization is near."

"Must have been thrown overboard from a nearby steamer," suggested the fat man in a bored tone. "Looks as though we won't have to wait long to be picked up." The last words brought a wry pucker to his lips.

"Let's see what it says," urged the talkative member of the trio, "Hey! What's this? Your picture's here!" he screamed at the fat man. "Read this headline!"

MATCH KING SYMES SKIPS COUNTRY TO ESCAPE UNCLE SAM'S WRATH

Charged with Avoiding Process Tax on Slightly Used Matches—
Konstantine Yankopolus to Prosecute
for United States

June 20, 1953 (AP)—Harold Symes, millionaire match king, who has amassed a fortune selling second-hand matches, and hired Attorney Roland Balthazzar to protect his interests, is fleeing a hopeless lawsuit—

For a moment the fat man forgot his acted indifference, and with an ugly scowl reached quickly to jerk the newspaper out of the other's hand. Before he could be stopped he had torn it into fragments which now were strewn around the raft.

"Well," he said belligerently, "Now that you know all about me, tell me about yourself." He turned to the gentleman who had done so much talking all the afternoon.

Just then the tall man, who had been searching the horizon for several minutes, called to the other two, "Do you see that moving speck?" he asked eagerly. "Looks like a steamer. It's coming near fast, isn't it?"

"Listen," spoke Symes, "I'm not going back on any American-bound steamer. I'm staying right here until I'm picked up for Europe. While we're waiting, I want to know what you two have been doing since you graduated. How about you, Anthony?"

Carlton needed no urging to talk. "I'll tell you," he began, "Because of an unusually lively jaw, I found work in a tailor shop, where they harnessed that jaw of mine to a sewing machine treadle. Unfortunately I had to leave this happy job because of laryngitis which kept me miserably silent several weeks. Then a barber hired me. Recently I was unanimously awarded a recording phonograph and a free trip to Europe, as the most talkative barber in the Western Hemisphere. While in Europe to compete for international honors, I expect to reap a tidy sum at my sideline of genteel blackmail—a gain from my old days on the 'Brevities'—but then I can't give away professional secrets."

The steamer was plainly visible now. If the distinguished looking man with the false teeth wished to tell his story he would have to talk fast.

"I've always yearned for a scientific career," he began, "After working my way through college washing test tubes, I found the world in need of a man to replace Einstein. I revised and added to his theories, but an unappreciative world tried to intern me in an insane asylum. However, my fellow scientists vindicated me, and now I am gathering material for a denunciation of high school mathematics."

There was no time for further conversation now, as the ship's lifeboat was already beside them. Symes would remain behind, and another steamer would later pick him up, the three agreed. Loath to leave him, Anthony and the tall man set out for the steamer. Provisions for Symes were rowed back to the raft. As the boat sailed away, Anthony stood in the stern with the other, waving a farewell to Symes. And so they drew farther apart, while Symes, standing on the raft occasionally left off counting the cans of provisions to shout, "Good-by, Carl! Good-by, Horowitz! Behave yourself, Jacob!"
